For decades, United Association for Labor Education (UALE) Summer Schools have provided leadership, skill-building, networking and educational programs to train and empower women to take on leadership roles in labor organizations.

Summer Schools provide a unique, rigorous and immersive experience, one suited to the best innovations of the current labor movement. The themes, topics, workshops and panels speak to the urgency for gender equality in leadership, solidarity and movement-building creativity.

Workers are under attack, and it is time for a renewed commitment to developing our next generation of leaders.

Labor donated scholarships available.

Summer Institute for Union Women
Aug. 9–13
UCLA, Los Angeles
arizocentino@ucla.edu

Midwest School for Women Workers
July 24–28
Indiana University, New Albany
www.midwestwomenworkers.org

Northeast Summer School for Union Women
July 30–Aug. 3
Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey
dlschulman@work.rutgers.edu

Southern School for Union Women
July 27–30
Florida International University, Miami
Labor@fiu.edu; 305-348-2371

Multigenerational learning and mentorship

Learning from and building solidarity across unions, industries, regions and movements

Panels, speakers and participants from alternative labor organizations

Emphasis on organizing, diversity, international solidarity, language justice and young workers