Des Moines Henry County Labor Council presents:

Labor History:
How American workers have impacted American history

September 27th: 8 am—NOON

WHERE: Des Moines Henry County Labor Council
16452 US Highway 34, West Burlington, IA

Though Iowa is typically considered an agricultural state, it also has a rich industrial, manufacturing and mining history, and with that a rich history in organized labor.

In fact, the first trade unions in Iowa date from the late 1850s. As well, Iowans such as John Lewis were instrumental in the expansion of the AFL-CIO and the establishment of labor laws.

To learn more about labor history in the U.S. as well as Iowa’s role in helping shape the labor landscape, come to the University of Iowa’s Labor Center Course on Labor History being held at the Machinists Hall. Sponsored by the Des Moines Henry County Labor Council

RSVP: Ryan Drew: rdrew@Local150.org or DHCLC@hotmail.com / 319-759-3188

University of Iowa Labor Center Class for Central Labor Councils

Labor Center educators can travel to your area to conduct a customized class that suits the needs and interests of your Central Labor Council or local union. In the recent past, Iowa Central Labor Councils have hosted Labor Center programs on topics such as steward education, workers’ compensation, mobilizing members, health care, labor history, and many others. Classes can range from a short evening class in conjunction with regularly scheduled meetings, full or half-day programs on weekends or week days, or multi-week series.
