On March 25, 1911, a horrific fire broke out at the Triangle shirtwaist factory in NYC and 146 workers died, mostly young immigrant women. This fire changed America...

FROM THE ASHES OF THE OLD:
THE TRIANGLE FIRE AND ITS LABOR RIGHTS LEGACY

Presente—She Is Here with Us: Paintings by Janet Essley
Paintings of garment workers from around the world on exhibit:
March 21-April 3 at the UI Center for Human Rights
April 4-11 at the UI Theatre Building

In Memoriam: The Triangle Factory Fire 100th Anniversary
Friday, March 25, 12 noon-1 p.m.
UI Main Library, room 2032
Featuring remarks from History Professor Linda Kerber, dramatic readings, and discussion.

Triangle: A play by Janet Schlapkohl
April 7-10, UI Theatre Building
See inset below for details.
Featuring post-performance “talk-back” sessions with labor rights scholars and activists.

Unfinished Business: Hawkeye Apparel and the Student Anti-Sweatshop Movement
Thursday, April 14, 7 p.m., 125 Trowbridge Hall
Featuring live video chat with unionized Dominican Republic factory workers who sew Hawkeye apparel under the Alta Gracia label.

These events are free and open to the public.
Sponsored by UI Center for Human Rights, UI Labor Center, UI Iowa Women’s Archives, UI Department of Theatre Arts and UI International Programs

For more information and local event details, see www.uchr.org.
To follow national commemorative events, see www.rememberthetriangelfire.org.

Printed at UI Copy Centers by employees represented by AFSCME Local 32.
Individuals with disabilities are encouraged to attend all University of Iowa-sponsored events. If you are a person with a disability who requires an accommodation in order to participate in this program, please contact Liz Crooks in advance at elizabeth-crooks@uiowa.edu.