RECRUITING WOMEN
The very idea of the home front—captured in this appeal to “your duty ashore, his afloat”—expanded the scope of “domestic duties” to include wartime work and enlistment in auxiliary military services such as the Spars.
Appeals to local and community efforts often directly targeted women.
As the labor shortage deepened, the government and private employers began making direct appeals to women workers.